JUDGE GILBERT

Goes After King Swope
Without GlovesADDRESSES LARGE CROWD
HERE MONDAYSenator Charles M. Harris Speaks.

Judge Ralph Gilbert, of Shelbyville, Democratic candidate for Congress in this District, spoke to a crowded auditorium at the court house here last Monday. Senator Charles M. Harris, of Versailles, followed Judge Gilbert in a fine address. It was Senator Harris' first appearance here and he made a splendid impression on his hearers, bringing out many good points incident to the present campaign. The speakers were introduced by County Attorney, Green Clay Walker, who served as chairman of the meeting.

Judge Gilbert charged Congressman Swope with "flooding" the district with false and anonymous circulars, stating that Judge Gilbert had charged U. J. Thomas, of Shelby County, $75 for affidavits in connection with his questionable.

Judge Gilbert then read an affidavit, sworn to by Thomas that Judge Gilbert had nothing to do with his questionable, and that the service for which he paid Gilbert a fee was the taking of an appeal to the district board for a reclassification, for which all attorneys charged. Judge Gilbert declared that Swope's charge was "the unusual action of the discredited political candidate who is unable to stand on his own record or the record of his party." He declared that Congressman Swope, "by bragging on his war record and intentionally leaving his audiences under the belief that he saw active service in France even to describing the battles, has disgusted the soldiers of the district who knew the facts" that thirty-five of the veterans of Anderson County, without any suggestion from Judge Gilbert, prepared and published a statement denouncing Swope's method of campaigning and declaring they would vote against him. Judge Gilbert in stating his position in regard to a "bonus for the soldiers of the World War" said he was in favor of the four-fold bonus plan advocated by Governor Cox, and endorsed by the Democratic platform.

Judge Gilbert told how the Republicans had promised lower taxes, fewer offices and to "Free Old Ring." He told of Morrow's tearful plea for Old Ring last year and said that even Old Ring would this year have to pay an ad valorem tax, as well as the poll tax, and that every citizen's taxes had been "raised in two ways, by an increase in their assessment and by a raise in their tax rate."

Judge Gilbert told of the enormous expenses of wars and war equipment, and said if a dollar were set aside for "every second of time since Adam and Eve were in the garden of Eden, the total would not pay the bill." He said Secretary Daniels had decided that $800,000,000 should be appropriated for the American Navy if the United States did not go into the League of Nations. He said the League was at least "a start in the right direction, and we shall never get anywhere unless we make a start." He declared the Constitution of the United States was itself a League of Nations, and told how it had been amended nineteen times, the last two amendments being the greatest of the all, "a sentiment which was roundly applauded. Answering the charge that the League is un-American, he asked how it could be so un-American and yet be fought so bitterly by every pro-German in America.

Judge Gilbert discussed the soldier bonus at some length, asked why the Republican Congress did not pass the bonus bill, and if it did not pass the bonus bill when it had control of the last Congress how it could be expected to pass the bonus bill in the next Congress.

Judge Gilbert told of the use of his Congressman's frank by Swope to send out personal letters of a political nature, addressed to whites and negroes alike, and all beginning: "My Dear Friend:" Judge Gilbert said the people paid for the paper and envelopes on which the letter was sent, and even paid the Secretary who prepared the letters.

"The only reason the Republicans oppose the League of Nations," he said, "is that they may appeal to the prejudices of the prejudiced and get votes by misrepresenting that they could not possibly get in any other

GOOD SCHOOL

TICKET.

Eight Names Are On Ballot For Board Of Education.

Eight persons, including one woman have filed petitions with County Clerk, J. B. Bourne, to have their names placed on the ballot as candidates for membership on the County Board of Education.

The following names will appear on the School Ballot for Garrard County: H. M. Kurtz, R. L. Barker, W. H. Brown, C. E. Ledford, J. D. Wynn, Oscar Ray, J. M. Crisillis and Mrs. Lizzie Bruner.

Any of these five should make a good board and its up to the citizens of Garrard County, outside the Lancaster Graded School District, to make a selection of five of these to serve on a Non-Partisan Board of Education, and to vote for them.

Under the new State law the board will consist of five members and will hold its first meeting the first Monday in January; the five candidates receiving the largest number of votes, will receive certificates of election.

As the new act provides for long and short terms, the new board of members will have to determine the length of their terms by drawing lots. The act specifies that two members shall serve for one year, one or two years, one or three years and one for four years.

Miss Jennie Higgins the present Superintendent of Schools, elected for a term of four years, will continue as superintendent until January 1922. At that time the board will elect a successor. The new law makes the superintendent's post a selective one instead of an elective one.

King Swope

A "Runner."

Congressman King Swope is a runner. He demonstrated that conclusively at Kings Mountain Tuesday night. The Congressman was billed for a speech at that place and so was Private George T. Davis. It is possible that Mr. Swope's appointment was made first as he was given the right to speak first. Mr. Davis who spoke in the interest of the democratic ticket, asked Mr. Swope for a division of time, and sat throughout the Congressman's address and gave him perfect attention, thinking of course that Swope would extend to him the same courtesy. But nay, the doughty "warrior" who wore a captain's uniform in this country during the great world war, not only declined to hear Mr. Davis, but at the conclusion of his speech, gathered up his papers and hurriedly left the room, asking as he departed that all of his friends come down to the entrance of the school building and shake hands with him. Amid hoots and jeers, Swope left Kings Mountain in a hurry, thereby showing that he is a runner in at least one sense of the word. It was perhaps well that he did run, for never have the people of Kings Mountain listened to a more masterly address than the one delivered by Private Davis. His denunciation of Swope, who behaved so discourteously, was scathing in the extreme, and the Congressman, had he but stayed would never have forgotten it. To the credit of a number of Republicans, he said, that they heartily disapproved of Swope's action, one of them took the floor, and called on all present to remain and give the Democratic speaker the same attention as was given the Republican speaker.—Interior Journal.

Judge Gilbert showed that all the leading religious denominations of the world had endorsed the League of Nations, that the farmers' organizations backed it and that no humanitarian organization of any kind had declared against it, while leading humanitarians and philanthropists the world over had declared for it. Answering Congressman Swope's misrepresentations of the League, he quoted from leading Republicans, such as ex-President Taft and Prof. Irving Fisher, in support of the League as a means of bringing peace on earth for all time.

Judge Gilbert closed his speech with an appeal to the women to vote the Democratic ticket. "It means a vote to uphold international integrity," he said. "It means a vote for national prosperity, for peace on earth and good will to men; it means a vote for the white supremacy in America and in our beloved State."

EFFECTIVE PLEA
FOR DEMOCRACYMrs. Cora Wilson Stewart
art Speaks At Ware-House.

Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, of Morehead, Ky., founder of the Moonlight Schools and Democratic orator, spoke here last night to a splendid audience of one thousand or more people, consisting of both men and women.

Mrs. Stewart was introduced by Hon. H. Clay Kauffman, and he did it to a queen's taste, bringing the house to its feet, when he took a crack at Morrow and his "high tax" administration. It was a great introduction and went straight to the mark.

Mrs. Stewart began her speech by recounting to the audience some of her experiences at the San Francisco convention, to which she was a delegate and where she seconded the nomination of James M. Cox. She went into some of the features of the League of Nations and explained many of the points to which the republican party are so seriously objecting, and insisted that the Republican campaign is made on lines of misrepresentation rather than education; that the democrats are anxious that every man, woman and child in the country read and study the League Covenant, while the Republicans are not only misrepresenting its contents, but are afraid to publish it in the campaign handbook and the Republican press will not dare print it.

She said that the Republicans were insisting that the League would involve in wars, would cause us to have to send thousands of our young men into foreign lands to fight foreign wars in which we had no interests or care, but that no one who would give time to read the Covenant could really believe this, and that the Republicans themselves did not believe it was true, but were using this propaganda in a vain effort to stem the tide of the republicans which were daily turning from them to the Democratic ranks. She paid a beautiful tribute to the American soldier boys and their part in winning the world war, that while the Republicans insisted that the Democrats wanted to leave the Stars and Stripes and take a new flag to be known as the League of Nations flag; the real fact is that the League of Nations has no flag but the blood of the boys who gave their lives on Flanders field.

At this point she paid a beautiful tribute to such a flag when one is to be made and said she would like to take some part in its making.

She made a strong plea for Senator Beckham and Judge Ralph Gilbert, denying that the former was ever against the increase in the pay of teachers and had always encouraged the advancement of the schools of the state and that the state capital could be pointed to with pride as one of the monuments of his handy work while he was Governor of Kentucky. She called attention to the fact that Mrs. Christine Bradley South, one of the foremost lady leaders in the Republican party was taking a great interest in the Republican campaign and at times was bitterly attacking President Wilson. But she insisted that in these attacks Mrs. South was not sincere and quoted from an article written by her some time ago, when she praised President Wilson in the highest terms and insisted that he was as great a man as President Lincoln.

She said that many Republicans were daily abandoning the sinking ship of Republicanism and coming to the Democratic banner; that there are many fine Republicans and the finer they are the faster they flock to the Democratic standards. She said that it was strange to her how any Democratic women could stay away from the polls on Nov. 2nd., or how any white woman could vote the Republican ticket.

She put Governor Morrow in a class with "Fatty" Arbuckle and Charlie Chaplin, saying that he had a way of entertaining the people, but gave no enlightenment or edification.

She said that the record of Harding was about as changeable in Congress as it is in the present campaign. In Congress he was continually having the names of different boats changed and by actually count he had changed the names of 732 boats and that now she wanted him to have the privilege of naming one more boat, and that one is to be the boat that will take him up Salt river on November 3rd.

One of the happy and pleasant features of the evening was the sing-

BUMPER CROWD

Heard Dr. E. L. Powell
Last Thursday Night.

Not in the memory of the oldest inhabitant, has as large a crowd greeted a political speaker as heard Dr. E. L. Powell at the Garrard Tobacco Warehouse last Thursday night. Two hours before the time advertised that the speaking would begin, the people began to come into town and making headway to the warehouse in order to get a close up hearing to the noted divine. Seats had been arranged to seat five thousand people and conservative ones, including Dr. Powell himself, put those in attendance at 4,000 people.

Owing to the faulty acoustics of the immense building, it was impossible for all to hear Dr. Powell, yet the closest attention was given by the crowd and listened with interest throughout the one and half hours of its delivery. It was a masterly address and one that only men of Dr. Powell's caliber is capable of delivering. He vigorously defended the League of Nations and converted many who were present, to his way of thinking.

Dr. Powell was exceedingly gratified at the immense gathering, complimenting the committee in charge for its splendid work and wondered how such crowd could be gotten together in a town of 2,500 inhabitants.

GOVERNOR

MORROW

Spoke To Immense
Crowd Here Last Monday.

The local Republican committee, which had charge of the speaking appointment of Governor Edwin P. Morrow here last Monday, are to be congratulated upon the success of the meeting, if a good crowd is to be taken into consideration, for the Garrard Tobacco Warehouse where the speaking was held, was being rapidly filled long before the time announced for the address to be made.

Governor Morrow never fails to draw a good crowd out to hear him when he speaks in Lancaster and he certainly must have been proud of the gathering that greeted him here last Monday.

The house had been previously decorated, with flags, bunting, pictures of Republican candidates and many flowers, which showed artistic taste by those who performed this part of the work.

When Governor Morrow entered the building, the applause that greeted him for several minutes was deafening, many carrying their enthusiasm so far as to throw hats into the air, that made the huge building echo from cellar to dome.

He was very happily introduced by L. L. Walker, who was also given an ovation, for his voice has been heard in so many gatherings throughout the state and county during this campaign. Governor spoke for nearly two hours and had the undivided attention of the crowd though it was impossible for those in the rear of the floor to hear him. He took a crack at the Democratic party in general and the League of Nations in particular, calling the latter a "League of War" which he thought would be more appropriate than the League of Nations. He made a strong appeal to the women voters, many of whom were present and urged all to go to the polls on November 2nd., and by so doing Kentucky would give a handsome majority for the Republican ticket. After the speaking many pressed forward to shake the hand of the Governor and express to him their appreciation of his masterly address.

ing of the choir composed of several hundred men and women, the most catchy song among them being "Cox Means Victory." It has the right ring and brought forth much applause, as did many utterances of Mrs. Stewart.

The latter address was considered the best vote getter and Democratic speech heard in Lancaster during the present campaign.

THE CLOSING DAYS.

Will The Campaign Close As
It Begun?

(Editorial)

This political campaign will be recorded as one memorable in American history. The women of the Republic have been franchised and cast their first vote on November 2nd. The voters of the country have never been so intensely interested in a political event as in this election. But in addition to this contest has been intensified and the people aroused by a constant and premeditated misrepresentation by the Republican organization and speakers which amounts to open falsehood, and ought to be met at the polls by a repudiation of their candidates and the whole party organization.

Since it has been so apparent from the beginning that the Republican organization was determined to win the fight without regards to the means and began to spread this false propaganda from the beginning of the campaign we may expect and do expect the campaign "dope" to fly more insidiously at the close than even at any other time. One of the grosser misrepresentation for the whole campaign and one that seems to have served best the purpose of those interested has been to tell the timid and unadvised voter that should the League of Nations be ratified that American boys will soon be fighting on foreign soil to settle the quarrels of other nations which the United States is not concerned. This falsehood has spread far and wide and in most instances by people who do so wilfully and knowingly. The fact of it is this, the League of Nations is presented for the purpose of promoting World Peace. It is a contract by all the nations participating in it to keep the peace, to reduce armament, reduce the manufacture of war materials and to do all other things tending to promote peace and to arbitrate all disputes among the nations and make war the last purpose and plan after all other means have been exhausted. The answer to such propaganda is simple. We have had war without a League of Nations in which our boys have fought the bloodiest war recently in the history of the world, costing hundreds of thousands of lives and this country twenty-two billions of dollars. Since we have war without the League of Nations something ought to be done to make a war in the future improbable if possible. The League of Nations is the only remedy offered. War between the nations of the earth may be looked for at any time without some kind of a contract between them to keep the peace, some kind of a recognized plan to keep and recognize international arrangements and understandings. The real question, therefore, is, are we less liable to have war with or without the League of Nations? Those who are spreading this false alarm about war if we should have the League of Nations have never once suggested the idea of how soon our boys would again engage in battle on foreign fields without a League. And the truth of it is, the voter should understand that the chances are manifold greater that our boys would soon be again in camp on foreign battle fields if we defeat the League of Nations than if we ratify it. Prior to the time the controversy was raised as to the ratification of the League by a few Republican Senators for the sole purpose of creating a political issue people every where without political affiliations were clamoring for an international arrangement tending to promote world peace. Now, we find them objecting to the only plan suggested and they confess their inability and lack of qualification to handle the government while objecting to this one is not offering a substitute. Another week argument offered for the purpose of creating a prejudice and misrepresenting the League at the same time is that England has six votes and the United States has one vote. While it is true that in the Assembly Canada, Australia and other British provinces have one vote while the United States has one, the real governing body of the League is the Council, England has one vote only and the United States has one and before any country can be affected the nine votes in the Council must be unanimous. These misrepresentations as to the effect of the League is to frighten the timid and lay a foundation for the political prejudices to build an excitement and give an excuse to support their party and its candidates. We urge Democrats and independent voters who believe in the principle of the League of Nations, the real issue in this campaign, to be active, in correcting these false statements wherever possible and work for the Democratic ticket until four o'clock of the day, November 2nd.

CONTESTANT WINS.

Big Will Contest Tried.

The contest entered in the Garrard County Court of the will of the late Mrs. Bell Taylor which bore date of June 25th, last made while she was at the Lexington hospital offered for probate at the September County Court was tried last week before Judge Stapp. Mrs. Taylor had made a will dated April 27th, 1920 which was only a few weeks before she was hurt, by which she had given all her property to her husband, Cyrus Taylor. By the will contested she gave her husband only the net earnings of the estate, after the executor had paid all the debts and cost of handling the property, which the contestants contended would amount to practically nothing. The contestant took the position that the husband would get nothing for at least eighteen months. By the will made in Lexington Mrs. Taylor gave $500.00 to one of the nurses at the Hospital, Miss Overly. The evidence developed on the trial showed that Mrs. Taylor had first seen this nurse only about twelve or fourteen days before the will and that Mrs. Taylor did not even know the name of this nurse at the time the will was written. It was proven that she called this nurse Mrs. Conn, believing that she was her neighbor, Mrs. James Conn, of Lancaster at that time. In this will she directed that the property remaining at the death of Mr. Taylor be divided equally between Mrs. Carrie Wyman, her niece and Mrs. Wm. Dickerson, of Lancaster, her cousin, leaving nothing to her sister, Mrs. Sweeney. The case was fought out with energy by attorneys on both sides, Messrs. Everett Hoover, of Nicholasville and J. E. Robinson, of Lancaster representing the contestant, Mr. Taylor and Messrs G. C. Walker and E. V. Puryear, of Danville representing the contestees.

It took two days to try the case but when both sides had finished, Judge Stapp announced to attorneys that to him the evidence was plain and had thoroughly convinced him, and his mind was made up, so attorneys did not argue the case. Judge Stapp then announced that in his opinion from the evidence introduced it was shown that Mrs. Taylor did not have sufficient mind or mental capacity to make a will on June 25th, and refused to probate the will made in Lexington. The will made on April 27th, will be taken up for probate on October 29th.

Many people regard "charm" as a gift of the gods, given to some and denied to others, like all other natural gifts. But "charm" is a "gift" that all may possess in a greater or less degree if they are prepared to cultivate it. This quality is the outcome of true sympathy and kindness of heart.

The Friend, Indeed

By ROSE TRAVIS

The prettiest girl in Woodville was waiting in a garden hammock for Willis Thorpe. He came down the steps of the house a decidedly grave and unsettled expression upon his honest, open face.

Amy Robbins clasped her hands nervously as Thorpe shook his head rather gloomily and sighed. "I don't measure up to your father's requirements, Amy," he observed, "which means no engagement allowed, and therefore our marriage indefinitely postponed. Plainly, he thinks my prospects do not justify our union until I have a permanent position and something saved up."

"But oh! Willis, we could live on so little!" exclaimed Amy.

"That would not be justice to you, dear. No, he is right, but I have a certain idea in view I told him nothing about. I have learned that a forest preserve officer is to be appointed for this district at a salary that would lift us far beyond your father's restrictions. I am going to try and get it. I don't want the matter stirred up, for few know of the political plum soon to be offered. If they did I would be crowded out in the rush. I have some good letters to men of note and influence at Springfield, and I am going to put in two weeks down there pulling wires and trying to land the appointment."

"Oh! Willis, I do hope you get it!" "I understand that Senator Rossiter could have a good deal to say about it, but I haven't as yet found anybody who knows him."

"I shall be so lonely while you are gone."

"Well, there is your bosom friend, Carrie Trevor, to comfort you and that new prospective beau of hers, Martin Hood, will act as cavalier for you both when occasion requires."

"Oh! I shall stay strictly at home and just think of you all of the time," declared Amy loyally.

Thorpe fortified himself with his letters of introduction and commendation and a few hundred dollars he had saved, and left for the state capital the next day. Political tactics were something foreign to his experience, but he was keen witted and in a day or two was quite posted as to the mysteries and manipulation of lobbying and the like. He felt himself fortunate when one day he was introduced to a man named Seth Price. The go-between who brought about this apparently important acquaintanceship assured Thorpe that the fine dinner he bought him and a sum of money he loaned him comprised well deserved consideration.

"Price will fit you out, sure. He understands all the ropes and always lands his client," declared the man. "Just follow his orders, tip him a couple of hundred for his help and you've bought a splendid position cheap."

There was a week of hopeful anticipation, of many promises, of daily variety and activity for Thorpe. Then one day an honest man informed him that he was wasting both time and money, for Price had no real influence, and was deceiving him.

Thorpe was disappointed, almost discouraged. Then his aunt wrote him a letter that upset him greatly. She was naturally a shrew and a trouble maker, as he well knew, but she injected a poison into a certain dark insinuation she made that aroused Thorpe's jealousy and caused him no little unhappiness.

"That young fellow, Martin Hood, whom everybody supposed was the special beau of Carrie Trevor, is showing a great deal more attention to Amy than to his supposed lady love. You had better be getting home, Willis, if you do not wish to lose Amy, for they are together nearly all of the time."

Thorpe was pretty gloomy all the way home on the train, divided between worry about his disappointment and over Amy. It was twilight as he passed the Robbins home. Thorpe caught sight of two familiar figures there in the garden—Amy and young Hood. She held his hand and was looking up into his face as if betokening the deepest emotion. If they were only friends, they acted as though very dear to one another.

Hood was all excitement, as though greatly pleased with something. He patted Amy on the arm familiarly.

"Pardon me for intruding," Thorpe spoke harshly, "but it appears to me that some explanation is due me right here and now."

To his astonishment, instead of embarrassment at detection, confusion over untimely discovery, "the guilty wain" ran towards him all smiles and exultant.

"Oh, Willis!" chirped Amy gaily, "such news!"

"Congratulations upon my success," cried Hood, extending his hand. "Just think, Willis," fluttered Amy, "after you were gone I learned that Mr. Hood was a nephew of Senator Rossiter."

"And just an hour since I received this," and Hood waved an envelope. "It is a letter from my uncle and he grants my request. Your position is safe and I am glad to have been instrumental in securing the happiness of the best friend of my fiancée, Carrie Trevor."

And then Willis Thorpe eagerly grasped the extended hand of this grand friend and kissed Amy with the ardor of a young man more deeply in love with her than ever.

Good authorities give the average duration of human life as about thirty-three years. One-quarter of the people on the earth die before the age of six, one-half before the age of sixteen and only about one person of each 100 horn lives to the age of sixty-five.

SOLDIERS AGAINST SWOPE FOR CONGRESS.

It having been brought to our attention that Mr. King Swope, our present Congressman, has repeatedly made claims that the former soldiers and sailors were solidly for him in the coming election for Congressman; we, the following ex-service men who offered our all for our fellow citizens, hereby make statement to the effect that we WILL NOT support Mr. Swope because of his bitter attack against any form of a League of Nations, and because of the fact that he has a war record that he is continually bragging about in his speeches, leaving a false impression about service abroad:

SWOPE'S WAR RECORD.

King Swope went from Danville to an officers' training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, where he was commissioned a captain. He was assigned to a combat division, which later saw service in France. He did not see service in France, as one is led to believe from hearing him speak.

MR. THOMAS' AFFIDAVIT:

The affiant, U. J. Thomas, states he is the same U. J. Thomas, that made an affidavit against Judge Ralph Gilbert before the primary and now being used by Congressman Swope in his circular.

The facts are that Judge Ralph Gilbert had nothing to do with filling out or filing my questionnaire or doing any work in connection therewith. The amounts paid by me to him were upon appeal to the District Board at Lexington and for reclassification. Since making said affidavit I have investigated and find that every lawyer charged for this kind of service. I am therefore supporting Judge Gilbert and call upon all who want fair play to vote for him November 2nd.

(Signed)

U. J. THOMAS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this October 22, 1920.

(Signed)

E. T. POLLARD,

Judge Shelby County Court.

Shelbyville, Ky., Oct. 23, 1920.

To The Soldiers Of The Great War In The Eighth District:

Congressman King Swope realizing that he is defeated in a fair fight has adopted the discredited political method of deception, never employed except as a last chance. He has filled the District with a false and anonymous circular, mistating my position on the bonus, and alleges that I charged for filling out the questionnaire of affidavits relating thereto for one U. J. Thomas.

In answer to the first charge, read the affidavit of Mr. Thomas, which convicts Mr. Swope. Mr. Swope facing defeat, knowing he has no chance to go back to Congress on his own record or that of his party is attempting to deceive enough soldiers to bolster up his losing race. The service men who offered their lives in the World War have become disgusted with his tactics. Read the enclosed statement from the Anderson County soldiers which they had published in the Anderson News of October 21.

In regard to the bonus, my attitude is the same as that of the Democratic party. I stand with G. V. Cox and Senator Beckham and will support with all vigor of mind and body such relief for the soldiers of the World War.

The Republican platform on which Mr. Swope is running makes the soldiers no promise of any kind, nor gives him credit for any achievement.

In Mr. Swope's recent speech at the court house in Shelbyville, he made no mention of the facts set out in this circular. He was told by prominent Republicans not to mention any such matter as everybody in Shelby County knew that I devoted practically all of my time to filling out questionnaires without pay, and that such statements were untrue.

I do not believe the intelligent soldiers of the district will be deceived by any of the false charges sent at the eleventh hour broadcast over the district by Mr. Swope in an effort to avoid the defeat he and his party have so richly merited and will receive November 2nd. This is probably not the last of such false circulars you will receive on the eve of the election. I have too much faith in your good sense to believe they will effect your attitude in the election.

Thanking you for what you have already done for me and assuring you of my appreciation, both now and after I shall have taken my seat as your Representative in Congress, I am,

Respectfully yours,

RALPH GILBERT.

NEW ADMINISTRATION OF BEREA COLLEGE

William James Hutchins Inaugurated
President October 22nd

Possibly the most notable occasion in the history of Berea College will occur on the campus Friday and Saturday of this week. Professor William James Hutchins, of the Graduate School of Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, has been called to the presidency of Berea College, to succeed President William Goodell Frost, LL. D., who retired in June from a brilliant administration of twenty-eight years.

A program of unusual merit has been arranged by committees of the faculty and trustees. A dozen college and university presidents, the president of the Educational Association of the South, a representative of the Bureau of Education at Washington, and a message from the governor of Kentucky, will have places in the program. Probably the greatest single feature of the occasion will be the mounted pageant, prepared by members of the Department of Literature, and enacted by 500 students and teachers. The pageant will begin with a cabin home in Ireland in the XVII century, and trace the population through the periods of emigration, colonization, revolution, emancipation, and commercialization. The pageant portrays mountain life and its participation in all of the great events of American history, and ends with the great commercial development of the mountains through education, promoted by such schools as Berea College.

Berea's real worth to the great mountain field will be set forth in addresses by such men as Dr. McVey, President of the State University of Kentucky, and Dr. Morgan, President of the State University of Tennessee. It is expected by those who know him best that the most effective address of the day will be delivered by President Emeritus Wm. Goodell Frost, LL. D. This expectation is based upon the knowledge of his accomplishments as president of Berea College for twenty-eight years. President Frost's administration represents the third period in Berea's development.

The first is the Pioneer, or Founding period. This came under the leadership of John G. Fee and John A. R. Rogers, founders and pioneers in the wilderness. As the outgrowth of speaking and preaching against slavery, Berea College became a fact in 1858. Under these men the ideals and character of the institution became established. A program of action was planned and adhered to so long as they lived.

The second is the Building Period. In 1860 Edwin Henry Fairchild was called to the presidency, and for twenty-two years performed the difficult task of reconstruction immediately following the Civil War. Under his guiding inspiration many prominent donors enlisted in the service of Berea, the railroad was extended through this almost trackless region, the first brick buildings were erected, and the first permanent endowment raised. The Fairchild administration gave assurance that Berea would be a permanent institution.

The third was a period of Expansion and Adaptation. In 1892 William Goodell Frost began his administration, which closed this year with the coming of President Hutchins. President Frost worked strenuously for twenty-eight years with two impelling motives: one the guaranteeing of Berea's permanence; the other that of adapting its work to the great needs of the mountain people. His philosophy was that in order to most effectively influence the mountain region, elementary instruction must be given in a variety of subjects commonly treated as highly specialized and technical. He maintained to a consistent finish that students not ready for professional courses in Agriculture and Home Economics, could be given short practical courses that would enable them to do their own work in small communities in a far more efficient way than it was ever done before.

President Frost classified all the instructions, and as a result five distinct schools were organized. The purpose of this was to give a departmental air and professional inspiration to the various departments of study in the institution. The higher branches of learning were organized to conform with the entrance requirements of other colleges. This school is known as Berea College. All the classes which had as their objective the preparation of young people for teaching in rural or village schools were placed in one school known as the Berea Normal. All students not definitely planning to teach and not ready for college, but past the common school branches, were grouped in another school called Academy. A little later it was found that there were many students in the Academy who were not planning to go through college, but were anxious to take a short professional course that would immediately prepare them for service. For this group a school was invented called the Vocational School. Students took two-year professional courses, and went out to do life's work. The fifth school was for those whose education was belated because of lack of opportunity. This, known as the Foundation School, took all students below the eighth grade rank.

Buildings, dormitories and endowments had to be secured for all these schools, and to this task President Frost gave all his strength, and has been forced to retire because of impaired health. The program of adaptation was perfected; every school just mentioned was placed on a permanent basis, and many other features, such as our extension work, labor system, and low cost of living, were the work of his ingenuity.

The evidence of Berea's popularity and achievement is its large student body. It has grown from 300 students, including the children of teachers, to the largest school in Kentucky, with more than 2,500 students in attendance last year.

Berea's policy is never to look backward, except for the sake of inspiration and guidance. Berea always looks toward the future. It is with the future in view that President Hutchins was invited to become president. He comes with a record of achievement in the fields of teaching and preaching that is enviable. Those most familiar with his work say that he has never made a failure in any undertaking, and Berea College is to be congratulated upon getting a man with his history to guide its affairs during the fourth great period of its development. Berea's new president has for his main object the projection into the future of the highest ideals and the noblest aims of the leaders who have gone before, and the bringing into operation of new purposes and plans as the needs arise.

Berea's future is full of hope. NOTE: It may be of interest to the reader to know that President Hutchins is the author of Code of Morals for Boys and Girls, which won a $5,000 prize in 1917, in competition open to all America.

If your blood is in bad shape it shows up in your looks and feeling. When your blood is rich with red corpuscles your color is better—your lips are red, eyes wide open and bright; your good feeling shows in your actions.

Common sense will tell you that if weak, thin blood makes you look lifeless, it owns your vitality. If your vitality is low you have little power to resist disease germs. Men, women and children with rich, red blood are able to fight off the germs which bring severe illness.

When you feel run down and weak, with no appetite and no ambition, take Pepto-Mangan for awhile. It is a great blood building tonic. You should begin to feel better within a few days.

Pepto-Mangan is put up in both liquid and tablet form. Take either kind you prefer, because they have the same medical value. But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—"Gude's" The full name, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan," should be on the package. (Advertisement.)

A Word for the Ambitious Boy:

MANY an ambitious farm boy is being tempted to go out into the world to seek his fortune. If you are considering deserting the farm, you are facing a crisis in your life that deserves much earnest thought and study.

Talk the matter over with men who ought to know the right course for you. Don't decide too hastily. Perhaps your father will take you into partnership, give you an interest in a plot of ground or in some livestock that will be the foundation of a fortune. Statistics show that the chances for business success are ten to one in favor of agriculture.

For every ambitious country boy there are a dozen city toilers, sick and tired of the endless grind, struggling desperately to keep abreast of the cost of living, longing for a chance to take their families to God's great out-of-doors. Millions of men of the city are envying you this minute because you are young and on the farm. They know that the four-leaf clover of your good fortune grows by your home doorstep.

Good, modern, labor-saving machines are taking the drudgery out of farming and putting still more profit into it. We are headquarters for the International Full Line, including Titan tractors, International engines, and manure spreaders, Primrose cream separators, McCormick and Deering harvesting, haying, and corn machines, tillage tools, P.O. plows, etc. Such machines add to the profit and pleasure of daily life.

The Popcorn Man

By CECILLE LANGDON

(© 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

The popcorn man was a decided novelty when he established himself in Easton. It was at the fall season when county expositions, street fairs and the like brought a great many of the outside population to the village. His machine was run by a little steam engine. It had a cheery whistle and filled the air with an appetizing flavor, and the old fellow who passed out the salted bags with their buttered contents gave satisfactory value for money received.

He rarely spoke to anybody and was usually almost enveloped in a long linen coat, a down-drawn stonch hat and he wore long bushy whiskers. The fact was discovered that they were false.

"Makeup? Yes," he freely admitted to the curious and suspicious town marshal. "Why not? It gives me a picturesque identity, don't you see?"

It was during the second week of the reign of the popcorn man that Hilda Brewer came down town one evening driving the family automobile. The town band was giving a concert and, parking the machine at the curb, she, like others, strolled about taking in friends, acquaintances and the lively strains of music. When she saw Elsie Dover at a little distance she immediately joined her. She liked Elsie and they were real friends. She liked Elsie's brother, Fitch Dover, too, but she had not told anybody that, not even herself. Her first question was regarding him. He had been in the city for a month and Hilda was eager to learn how he was getting along.

"Famously," he writes," said Elsie, "although he is dreadfully mysterious. He hasn't yet told us what he is working at, though papa thinks it is in some secret service position. Fitch wrote last week to him hinting that we had better look out for him soon, as he had a commission to execute at Easton."

"I shall be glad to see him," admitted Hilda. "We miss him up at the house."

The two girls finally separated and Hilda was on her way back to the auto, when a whiff from the corn popper revived early juvenile days and made her feel hungry. She approached the popper which the nondescript operator was moving to and fro, placed her nickel on the shelf leaf and just then her eyes met those of the popcorn man. A thrill, a tremor, a shock at the fairly impossible traversed her frame.

"Fitch!" she gasped involuntarily. The popcorn man cast a sharp, alarmed glance all about him. "Don't speak my name, don't recognize me, don't tell anybody I am here," he whispered quickly. "When I give you a paper bag take it home and keep it safely till I come and see you. Here. Pretend it is popcorn."

Hilda was all in a quiver. It was only by a gleam from those magnetic eyes of Fitch Dover that she had recognized him, despite his grotesque disguise. Here was mystery, secrecy, indeed. She went back to the auto. Somehow she was greatly interested and disturbed. Was Fitch in any danger? She did not start up the machine, she knew not why, and when Fitch, through for the evening, covered the popcorn wagon with a heavy piece of canvas and started away, slowly and at a distance she followed.

As he turned into another street an auto circled past her. Two men were in it. They halted as they neared Fitch, sprang out, there was a scuffle. They seemed to knock him senseless, picked him up, flung him into their auto and started up again.

All of a sudden then Hilda Brewer felt herself to be the center of a vast adventure. She did not try to analyze its merits. Her pulses beating tumultuously, she had but one idea—to keep her captive lover in sight until she could secure aid or rescue. Now, courageous to face any peril for his dear sake, she knew that she loved him.

It was apparent as the two men left the town behind that they noticed the pursuit. At all events they speeded up terrifically as they struck the open road. Hilda all in a flutter could only think of keeping them in view. As they turned a sharp curve they were momentarily lost to view. She shuddered and shrank down as a crash echoed out. Circling the curve she brought the machine to a halt.

The other machine lay overturned in a ditch, the two men under it. Flung free from it, Fitch revived from his first assault and was staggering wildly about. Vaguely and then wonderingly he recognized Hilda.

"Get to the nearest telephone, summon the police at Easton," he quavered, and sank to the ground from sheer shock and weakness.

What a story he had to tell when back to normal in a day or two. The real popcorn man had been the leader of a gang of burglars who were infesting the district, giving them "tips" as to prospective places to loot, communicating with them through notes in the popcorn bags and posing and acting up to the average peddler.

Fitch had captured him and had assumed his disguise, but had been suspected and captured. In the bag he had given to Hilda was sufficient evidence to bring the gang to justice and recover most of their ill-gotten gain. Through courage Hilda had saved Fitch. Love alone had inspired her daring. It was so plain to him that there was a proposal forthwith.

Will Rheumatism Again Bind You Hand and Foot?

If you had Rheumatism last year and treated only the pains of the disease by rubbing with liniments and lotions, you can be sure that soon again you will be in the shackles of this relentless foe. You may get some slight temporary relief from the pains of the disease by the use of these local remedies, but Rheumatism is too real and relentless a disease to be rubbed away. So many cases of Rheumatism come from a tiny germ in the blood, that you should try a remedy that has proven so thoroughly satisfactory in these cases. S.S.S., the fine old blood remedy cleanses the blood of all impurities, and removes all disease germs that may creep into the blood. Begin taking S.S.S. today, and if you will write a complete history of your case, our medical director will give you expert advice, without charge. Whistling Kids.

Have you ever noticed a small boy go whistling down the street? He was happy.

Some day, though, he may not be so happy. He may be president of the United States instead.

It's too bad we can't carry our exuberance of happiness through life and into the grave, instead of leaving it at the threshold of manhood, as most of us do.

When we reach manhood's state we plunge into the business of piling up money, and the pile is never satisfactory until it is larger than our needs require. Even then we yearn for more.

Some people never really enjoy their money because they never stop accumulating it long enough to take a rest. They forget the days when they were whistling kids, and joy was their portion in life.

Finally they die and leave their money for their relatives to scrap over and squander.

Perhaps they find in the hereafter the happiness they denied themselves in this life. But we doubt it. Even if they squeeze into heaven they won't remember how to whistle.

Whistling kids who discard their happiness in their prime will become morose in old age.

You can change a leopard's spots by daubing on a little paint. But in time the paint will wear off and the spots will still be there.

So it is with a man. He can money-grub through the years of his prime and in the winter of life he can fool the people by assuming a happiness he does not feel. But under the surface the canker still works. It will never heal.

Encourage your boy to whistle. Induce him to whistle a stirring tune every day of his life.

Then he will carry his whistling to the grave, and the harps of the angels will be in harmony with his soul.

Hitting The Long Trail.

There comes a time when each of us must hit the long trail to a world that is hidden from moral eyes—a world of which we hear much, but which we never see while life lasts.

The trail is plainly blazed by many markings, but it is only traveled by those who prepare themselves for the journey in advance. The guiding of our steps may rest in other hands, but the taking of them rests wholly with us.

As we aid in removing the obstacles from the paths of our neighbors and friends in this life, so will the obstructions be lessened or removed from our own paths when we take the long trail.

No good act of ours is so small, no kind word so insignificant, but what it has its reward when our earthly accounts are balanced.

It is not necessary to look afar for an opportunity to do good. Every day, every hour it is before us—in our community, in our own town, even in our own families.

By our acts we are judged by God and man. Man may not see them, all, but God misses nothing.

There are many little acts of kindness we might perform for those around us, or for the unfortunate in our midst—many little words of cheer or sympathy we might extend.

It is a long trail we must take some day, and our degree of comfort or discomfort will be decided before we start.

For man may not reap the pleasures of the next world without earning them while in the land of mortality.

Some people are continually wondering why there is so much contraband booze floating around a country that has adopted national prohibition.

They shouldn't wonder. The answer is very simple.

Money—influence—human nature.

The world was not made in an hour, and neither can it be revolutionized in a day.

Since the infantile days of the republic the warfare between the wets and the dries has been waging with undiminished fury. It will continue to be waged for many years to come.

Millions of men have become accustomed from long habit to their daily drink of intoxicating liquor. Oftimes it has been many drinks a day. To deprive them of it is like taking opium away from a dope fiend.

Many men will go to any lengths or expense in order to secure the liquor their system craves, and others will run any risk in order to get rich quickly in supplying it.

Some officials are honestly endeavoring to enforce the law, while others are amenable to "influence," are more politically "politic," and are plainly side stepping their sworn duty.

To completely suppress the contraband liquor traffic would require an army of prohibition agents as large as the American Expeditionary Force, and another army to watch the agents.

A lot of little fellows in the illicit trade will be convicted and punished, but the really big fellows—the brains and top-notchers—will more likely go free, at least as long as a certain stamp of public officials place the value of the vote above that of country.

Human nature—that's all.

Sunday, Oct. 17, was a trying one to every publisher who saw a copy of a certain great Chicago Sunday paper of that date.

The edition of the paper in question on that day consisted of one hundred and thirty-eight pages, and the circulation for that edition is presumed to be on a par with that of other Sundays—about four hundred thousand copies, perhaps more.

Fifty-five million two hundred thousand pages of paper used up in one day.

And this is but one Sunday edition of one daily paper out of all of the United States!

No wonder the small city daily and the country weekly is paying five times the price he paid for print paper before the war, and experiences great difficulty in securing it even at that prohibitive price!

The Lord made these publishers for some purpose, no doubt, even though they be nothing more than Lord's Day hogs.

Sometimes a man is given credit for being a deep thinker because he goes along the street with head down and apparently in a "brown study."

With some men it is simply a habit. With others it is a pose, assumed for the purpose of impressing the public. It is often successful.

The really deep thinker does not work his brain on the public street to any great extent. He affords it relaxation instead.

He knows that fresh air and a reasonable amount of freedom from care are essential to the proper functioning of his brain, and when he leaves his office or study he leaves his business of thinking behind him.

Because he does this he keeps both mind and body in fit condition, and is able to concentrate both when occasion requires.

DEATH COMES TO AGED LADY.

Mrs Jane Ballew passes Away.

About four o'clock last Monday afternoon, the spirit of Mrs. Jane Lackey Ballew took its flight into the Great Beyond. Death had been expected for several days and owing to her extreme old age, little hope was held out for her when she was taken to her bed about ten days ago.

Mrs. Ballew was probably the oldest woman in the county, having been born in Madison County, December 9th, 1828 and would have been 92 years old on her next birthday. She had lived in Garrard County for 67 years and up until about six years ago enjoyed good health. At this time she suffered from a stroke of paralysis and for the past six years has been confined to her room, occupying an invalid chair most of that time. She bore her suffering and afflictions without a murmur. She was the widow of the late Woodson Ballew and is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Charlie Ballew and Mrs. Joe Burnside of this city. It was at the latter place where she passed away and where she has made her home for many years.

She was a devout and conscientious member of the Presbyterian church, since her early childhood. Funeral services were conducted at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Burnside yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock, by Rev. H. S. Hudson, burial following in the Lancaster cemetery.

THOMAS ANDERSON Garrard's Oldest Citizen Passes Away.

The death of Mr. Thomas Anderson last Saturday morning at the home of Mrs. Pat Anderson on Richmond street, marked the passing of another of Garrard County's oldest citizens, two of whom have passed into the Great Beyond during the past week.

Mr. Anderson had only been confined to his room about ten days, but during that time the end came rapidly, though peacefully and without a tinge of suffering, as he told those who surrounded his bedside.

Mr. Anderson was born in Garrard County, on Sugar Creek, July 31st, 1829 and was in his 92nd year. Until the last few months he had been remarkably active for one of his age and spent much of his time with his friends on the street, who were always glad to greet him and hear him talk of incidents which took place many, many years ago, which he told so vividly and entertainingly.

Mr. Anderson was married twice during his life, his first wife being Miss Bettie Herndon. Later in years he was married to Mrs. Sallie Gibbs, of Madison county, both of whom had preceded him to the grave.

He was a faithful member of the Christian Church and for fifty years was a deacon in the local church of this city. He is survived by one brother, Mr. John Anderson, of Lexington and several grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted last Sunday afternoon at the home by Rev. H. S. Hudson, burial following in the Lancaster cemetery.

Lancaster High And Harvard Win Over Danville High And Centre.

The L. H. S. Foot Ball team won from "Little Britain" on the local gridiron last Friday evening by the score of 10 to 0.

The game was a hard fought one from the first to the third quarter when Coach Davis men weakened by the "hit'em hard boys" of Coach McRoberts and the local lads carried the ball over for the first and only touchdown during the game.

The first, second and third quarters were tough work outs for both sides, several forward passes were attempted by both sides only two being completed and the Lancaster High won them both.

The beginning of the fourth quarter every man of Coach McRoberts and Carrier were on their job, after several long runs, and passes Capt. Holtzclaw called for line plunges, his entire backfield consisting of Cochran, Cox and himself hit the line hard, until the fourth attempt when the Captain took the ball for a trick play and went over for a touchdown. Lancaster punted to the visitors and in a short time regained the ball, and carried it to the enemies 30 yd. line when Cox put the oval between the bars for a drop kick, making the score 10 to 0 for the L. H. S.

The following is the line for last Friday's game: Holtzclaw, Capt.; Cochran, Eugene, and Cox, Halves; Cochran, S. D., Q. B.; Bratton C.; Swope and Crutchfield, G. Aldridge, Stagner, Moore and Elliott G.; and Stapp and Anderson Ends.

Time of Quarters—12 Minutes. That Danville has two good teams we will all admit but they were out of their class when they played the L. H. S. and Harvard.

Many Boy Babies.

The old theory that nature provides for the loss in man power after a great war by producing more boys than girl babies is borne out in Paris birth statistics. During the present year nearly 60 per cent of the infants born in the French capital have been boys. The same thing was observed in Germany after the Napoleonic wars.

There will be pies galore and pies that will please the most fastidious.

ment for this splendid school and good friend decides to send us in one of those pies, you can just bet it will be appreciated and eagerly devoured.

Pie Supper A

Huge Success.

The entertainment and Pie Supper given by Miss Dora Scott and pupils of the Mason School, was a huge success. The net amount being $112.40, the largest amount yet collected at a District School from the sale of pies.

The first and lightest pie sold, brought the handsome sum of $16.00 and belonged to the charming Miss Reecie Muncie. Bidding was high on all pies, prices ranging from 75 cts. to $16.00.

Much credit is due the auctioneer,
Mr. Thos. K. Price for good order and the way he conducted the sales of the pies. The attendance was so large that it was necessary to sell the pies at the door in order that each one might have a chance of bidding on the pie of their choice.

The teacher and pupils of the school employ this means of thanking all those who helped to bring about this pleasing success. The proceeds of the sale will be used for the benefit of the school.

Mason Triplets

Create Court Stir.

When the name of Robert Mason was called to give testimony in a case in the circuit court on Friday morning, little attention was paid.
However, when the name of Rankin
Mason was called and there was a "dead image" of the retiring witness presenting himself, there was some interest shown by the liberal number present. This was nothing to the degree of interest, when the name of Alexander Mason was called, and another "duplicate" was presented. The young men are not only brothers, but are triplets, and their presence in the court room created considerable attention. The Mason brothers, sons of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Mason, residing south of the city in the Kavanaugh neighborhood, are apparently 30 years old, and, according to the saying, "alike as three peas." They are testifying in a case whereby they hope to establish the official line for division of property recently purchased. When seated side by side, there is such a resemblance that when one's name is called either could respond without being definitely recognized, except by one very familiar with them. Two of them served in the navy during the war, the third being left according to the board. —Richmond Register.

A Timely Signal

By WALTER J. DELANEY

(© 1920 Western Newspaper Union.)

"Stop—Danger!"

The post at the crossing bore the sign and from the window of the little watchman's shanty a dainty white hand was extended, waving a warning red flag. The automobile in which Wade Dysart and his friend, Nelson Prouty, were seated had already halted.

"Humph!" ejaculated the latter, "as you can see a train coming half a mile away down the rails in either direction, it seems to me that all this notification of peril is somewhat superfluous."

"Pop! At that moment, as the train thundered by, there was a disturbing explosion, and Dysart got out of the machine to view a flat rear tire.

"Perhaps it is better to heed signals on all occasions," observed Dysart. "A blowout or a dead engine going across the rails might mean disaster. See here, Prouty, I have no extra tube. I noticed a garage just back a bit. Won't you run back and get a tube, while I get things ready to put it in."

"Sure thing," responded the agreeable and accommodating Prouty, and steered by the wheel while Dysart pushed the machine to one side, and then Prouty started on his mission.

Dysart had the tire all ready for the insertion of a new tube within ten minutes, but Prouty did not appear. In fact, the latter did not find the special tube he was ordered to get at the first garage, and had to go some distance to the only other one in the town.

Another train went by. This time "the watchman" came out of the shanty, and Dysart was surprised and gratified to catch sight of a neatly attired, beauty-faced girl of about eighteen, the owner of the pretty hand that had previously attracted his attention.

She waved the flag to halt a farmer's wagon on the other side of the railroad, and then as the train passed went back into the shanty. Not for many a moon had Wade Dysart seen a more attractive being.

He could not resist the impulse to stroll towards the little structure. She nodded pleasantly as he faced the open window.

"A break-down, and waiting for my friend," he remarked, more from the hope of putting in the time engaging in conversation than anything else.

"It is always best to follow the rules," she replied.

"You seem to be at home here," said Dysart, noticing a book, a fan and a comfortable rocking chair.

"Only for the past two days," replied the girl. "The regular watchman is Mr. Martin, and I live at his house—at present. Some one had to act as substitute, so I volunteered."

"I see," observed Dysart thoughtfully, but somewhat mystified for the girl did not suggest the typical village maiden or the humble and obscure. Just then Prouty appeared. There was no excuse for further conversation, and Dysart went back to the automobile.

"Stop," he soliloquized. "It was worth stopping."

"Whatever has got into Wade?" many times during the next week or two his sister, who was engaged to Prouty, asked the latter.

"I have noticed he has missed me several mornings and evenings," replied Prouty.

"Yes, and came home two nights from a long spin, and I found a lady's veil in the car."

"Ah!" nodded Prouty significantly; "that looks suspicious."

"And a card with a notation on it—'Order at Penville the six newest photograph records. Send by train to Miss Ada Rigley, Penville.'"

"Penville," ruminated Prouty intelligently, aroused at once. "That was where Dysart met that pretty girl taking the watchman's place."

"The strange thing is, I know a Miss Ada Rigley in the city. They are a quite prominent family, and I saw by the paper she was summering at Penville. I did not mention my discovery to Wade. He is so queer."

"Queer, secretive, and stealing a march on me!" reflected Prouty. "I fancy I will investigate."

Which the close friend of Wade Dysart proceeded at once to do. Two evenings later when Dysart drove the attractive young lady of the watchman's shanty to the home where she was staying, that of the watchman, and turned homeward bound, Prouty ran his machine close beside him, halted him, and both came to a halt.

"I see you have been improving the time," greeted Prouty.

"Naturally, after meeting the most charming young lady I have ever known," replied Wade unblushingly.

"Notwithstanding the poor and humble guise of a watchman's relative?"

"Oh, Miss Rigley never posed as that. Certainly, I know who she is, for we have imparted mutual confidence."

"H'm! You don't mean to say it is serious?" suggested Prouty.

"Eminently so, and delightfully so," replied Dysart with happy heartedness. "It was an auspicious moment in my life when that signal stopped us and the automobile broke down."

"Yes, stop," suggesting the usual impetuosity of womankind."

"Exactly, and 'danger!' There was that for any observant young man to realize in the lovely eyes of Miss Rigley, and to fly forthwith unless he wished to become a lifetime captive to her witchery!"

FEED FOR BEEF PRODUCTION

Three-Year Experiment Shows That It Costs More to Feed Calves Than Older Cattle.

Results of a three-year-old experiment with calves, yearlings and two-year-olds to study the influence of age on the economy and profit of feeding for beef production indicated that the initial cost per hundred pounds of meat produced was greater with the calves than with the older cattle; that the length of time necessary for finishing steers decreased with age; that the rate and the cost of gain and the proportion of roughage to concentrates consumed increased with age; and that the amount of gain necessary in finishing cattle of equal condition decreased as their age increased. The difference in total quantity of feed necessary for finishing cattle of different ages and fed to the same marketable finish was negligible.

The experienced farmer who feeds cattle should handle older cattle in preference to calves, while the farmer who produces and finishes his own cut-

Finished Steers of Good Breeding Bring Much Better Price Than Scrubs.

He may find calves more profitable. While this is regarded as the best practice under ordinary circumstances, there are advantages, especially at this time in feeding younger cattle, the principal ones being the obtaining of a higher market price for the finished steer, if of good breeding, and an opportunity to hold for a longer period of time when fattened with less loss than the more mature steer.

GIVE HOGS' FEET ATTENTION

Bad Underpinning Are Often Due to Lack of Trimming as Well as to Overfeeding.

When the new breeder is getting ready to exhibit his hogs at the county and state fairs he should pay attention to the feet of the animals as well as to fitting them. If the animals are overfed, very often they have a tendency to go down in the feet. Bad feet are also often due to lack of attention as well as to overfeeding and poor breeding. Animals that are not given an opportunity to take a proper amount of exercise on hard ground are apt to show this trouble more than those under ordinary conditions. In trimming the toes the pig is thrown on its side and with a sharp jackknife the ends of the toes can be pared off. Occasionally the sole of the foot may need paring also, so that the pig will walk flat on the foot. Care should be taken to smooth up the job and to not cut the foot too deeply, so as to bleed and cause lameness. The trimming should be done at least ten days or two weeks before the show.

BEEF PRODUCTION FALLS OFF

Nearly Half of Farmers Last Year Operated at Loss—Similar Conditions This Year.

Beef in the United States was last year produced at an average cost of 14 to 15 cents, according to figures furnished by H. C. Taylor, chief of farm management of the United States department of agriculture.

However, only 58 per cent of the cattle concerned were produced for that and 42 per cent cost more. Fifty-six per cent of the producers kept these costs at 15 cents or less, so that nearly half of the farmers producing beef operated at a loss. 1920 figures indicate that a similar condition rules and that production is falling off considerably as a result, since no one likes to produce at a loss.

Feeding prices and land values are given as the reason for the falling off of the profit. As a remedy for it Mr. Taylor suggests keeping of better records of all farm accounts, elimination of excessive marketing charges and good management.

SCREENINGS NOT POISONOUS

As Feed Substitute for Bran They Can Be Fed to Sheep With Much Advantage.

According to a recent report of the U. S. department of agriculture, sweet clover seed screenings are not poisonous to live stock. They can be fed to sheep to advantage, being a good grain feed, but they probably are not so good as bran. However, as bran is a marketable product and sweet clover screenings are not, being an otherwise waste product of the farm, as a feed substitute for bran it constitutes a net saving of the cost of bran and is therefore of considerable value to the producer who can use it.

Those profiteers who have been hoodwinking the government by holding out on their taxes will have to pay up all arrearages before they can slip into heaven. Old St. Peter has no votes to consider.

If people who never take the trouble to vote were suddenly disfranchised they would emit a mighty roar of protest against being deprived of their inalienable rights as a citizen of this great and glorious land of the free. It might be a good way to root'em out of their holes.

Dismay was cast into Louisville Republican ranks when it was announced by I. W. Bernheim, millionaire philanthropist of this city, that he proposed to vote for a straight Democratic ticket this fall.

Mr. Bernheim is a life long Republican, and has always been a heavy contributor to the Republican campaign fund in this State.

He had three sons in the world war. "The League of Nations" he says, "is the world's holiest possession today. I am amazed at the Republican politicians playing football with it. Though I still consider myself a good Republican, I am going to vote for Gov. Cox and the Democratic ticket."

The drift from Republican ranks into the Democratic among the influential men of the East continues Monday morning Geo. White, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee gave to the public the names of one hundred and twenty-one Republicans and Bull Moose who will vote for Cox and the League of Nations. In giving their reasons for this position these Republicans say in part:

"True Republican statemanship would have welcomed and supported the Covenant, would have sought to strengthen rather than to weaken its effective guarantees against aggression. It is now too late to talk of a new association of nations to be created under Republican auspices. The proposal to ask forty-three other nations to scrap the existing league, enter another peace conference and agree on some undefined experiment, can no longer be taken seriously. We urge all Republicans and Progressives to put patriotism above party, to join with us for working for Cox and Roosevelt, and for those candidates who stand clearly and frankly for the ratification of the treaty and adherence to the League."

WINTER ATTENTION TO PIGS

Two General Methods for Profitable Handling of Fall Porkers Given by Specialists.

When the fall pig crop has been weaned the future management of the hogs becomes of paramount interest to the grower. Specialists of the United States department of agriculture report two general methods for the profitable handling of fall pigs during winter. One system is to push the hogs as rapidly as possible in order to sell them on the market before the hot weather of the following summer. This really is the "hothouse" method of producing pork, as the animals are given extra care and feed in rushing them toward rapid maturity. This method involves particularly good housing for the hogs, as protection from the severe weather of winter in the colder locations is essential. One of the most important factors is clean bedding. Above all things fall pigs should never be allowed to sleep in damp bedding, as it is a prolific source of colds and pneumonia.

Another method of carrying fall pigs through the winter is to maintain the animal on a good growing ration which is relatively rich in protein-carrying materials. These are prerequisite for the making of a large, bony framework. The idea is to prime the hogs into good condition so that they may be turned out on grass the next spring with a well-developed framework of which they can store a surplus of fat. These animals can then be carried through the summer on good pasture with the addition of a little grain, thereby making some gain in weight and considerable gain in size, and be in splendid condition the following fall to fatten rapidly on the new crop. This system involves maintaining the hogs on the farm in some instances until the animals are fifteen to sixteen months of age, but often the porkers can be fed more cheaply where this method is practiced than where the hogs are pushed rapidly to market maturity.

Many herdsmen neglect to provide a sufficient amount of drinking water for the hogs during the winter months. Pigs should have free access to pure water at all times.

POOR REPUTATION OF MULES

Animals Has Been Grossly Labeled and Is No More Treacherous Than the Horse.

A good many men refuse to work or raise mules at all because of the sinister reputation they have, but no one need hesitate to add a few dollars to his bank account on that reason, for the fact of the business is that the mule has been grossly labeled and is indeed no more unreliable or treacherous than the horse. When we remember that most mules are sold from the country before the age of four we realize that the time that we see a mule is during his young and lively days and that his "battering average" for that time is little worse than the young horses of the same age. For a great many kinds of work the mule is far superior to horses and in cultivating corn they are especially good for no horse team ever learns as quickly to follow the narrow thread of green and to turn as carefully at the ends of the rows.

BEET PULP GOOD FOR LAMBS

Value Demonstrated in Recent Experiment Conducted by Nebraska Agricultural College.

The value of dried beet pulp for lamb feeding has been demonstrated in a recent experiment conducted by the Nebraska Agricultural college. The most profit was made on lambs fed a ration including alfalfa, dried pulp, cottonseed cake and silage. This ration proved superior to standard rations such as alfalfa and corn or alfalfa, cottonseed cake and corn.

At prevailing prices for feeds the lambs fed for 100 days on the alfalfa, dried pulp, cottonseed cake and corn silage ration made a profit of $3.80 per lamb as compared with a profit of $2.40 per lamb on those fed alfalfa, corn and cottonseed cake. About the same profit was made on another lot fed alfalfa dried pulp for 90 days and corn for 40 days.

A Model Husband

By RALPH HAMILTON

"A good provider is an ideal husband," declared Mrs. Helen Bliss, "and the making of one depends on the firmness and common sense of the wife. Some women aim to be 'the boss.' They therefore reach for an empty distinction that brings nothing but a name. My theory has been to be a guide, to watch the husband closely, to act with decision without the husband guessing it."

Thus to her caller, young Mrs. Cora Ballin, bride of a year, whose mind was always open for suggestion and advice, Mrs. Bliss went into details: "In the same way I look to all my rights and quietly enforce them. I have trained my husband to perfection. No husband wishes to allow his wife all the money she needs—not that they are stingy, but they fix the certain amount for household expenses they think the wife should have, and she drudges along all the rest of her life on the same old miserly basis. When I have found it tight squeezing I have just helped myself."

"What do you mean by helping yourself, Mrs. Bliss?" inquired Cora earnestly.

"Oh, well, the average husband is careless of his money. He carries it in his pockets half the time, not knowing how much he has. You know nearly all the men folks who amount to anything belong to the town club."

"Yes," nodded Cora.

"It is costly. They have expensive suppers and special functions where they play cards and the like, while we poor women have to scrape and save to buy a bit of finery for a call or a party. Well, I began to notice some time since that Robert would come from the club feeling unusually pleasant, and I found out by clever questioning that he had been a winner."

"Isn't that gambling?" inquired Cora breathlessly.

"The men don't call it so. They term it a lucky strike. Well, on one of these occasions I investigated Robert's pockets. There was a great roll of bills in his coat. I helped myself to half of his winnings."

"Dear! dear! How innocent and inexperienced you are," merely laughed Mrs. Bliss. "You'll learn in time, you'll learn."

Cora did not fancy the prediction, nor did she like the suggestion of underhandedness. In two instances after that she heard younger wives than Mrs. Bliss discuss the same equivocal method cold bloodedly, as if it were an inherent right for a helpmeet to make all out of a husband she could.

Now Cora had no knowledge whatever that her husband, Walter, engaged in anything more flagrant than a game of cards at the club to pass a pleasant hour, but gradually her sensibility as to the matter of a forced contribution of the husband's spare cash became less acute. One evening Walter brought home with him to dinner a visitor to the club, a man of some business prestige and importance. They removed their overcoats at the hall rack. A pleasant hour passed by and after the meal, passing through the hall, Cora observed Walter's gloves lying on the floor beneath the overcoats.

She restored them to a pocket, but as she did so her hand came in contact with a roll of bills. For over a week she had been contriving how to spare a little money for a new hat. Temptation assailed her. Doubtless Walter carried in that loose manner the money represented by card earnings at the club. She fluttered and hesitated.

"I'll take it," she determined, though uneasily. "Then if Walter makes any comment I will make a playful jest of it."

Cora pocketed the money, secretly, guiltily. The time came for the guest to depart. As Walter helped him on with his overcoat their visitor groped in a pocket. He drew forth a pair of gloves.

"Not mine," he said, inspecting them.

"Why, no, they are mine," spoke Walter. "How did they ever come in your coat?"

"And, hello!" commented the guest further. "I had a little roll of money gone! Any dishonest servants around Ballin?"

Cora's cheeks were burning. She discovered her double error. She made a move to search over the rug and arose with the missing money in the clasp of her trembling fingers.

"Is this the money?" she asked as naturally as she could.

"Why, yes," was the reply, after an inspection.

The guest departed. Walter came back into the hall found Cora hysterical and in tears.

"Why, Cora, dear, whatever is the trouble?" he inquired solicitously.

"Oh, Walter!" she sobbed, clinging to him frightened and contrite. "I have been a wilful, wicked creature."

Her face hidden upon his shoulder Cora flattered forth her story. Walter Ballin laughed as he cheered and comforted her.

"I think you are right in wanting more money," he said generously, "but I never risk any money at the club, so don't rely upon my gains, as they call it. Eschew your advisers as to how to train a husband. Just keep on giving me your love and your confidence and I will always meet you half way."

"Oh, I am cured of my folly after my escape from becoming an actual thief!" insisted Cora thankfully.

Cracks at Creation.

Reverses are depressing only to those who give in to them.

"F. O. B." now has a new significance. It is tacked onto invitations in high society and means "fetch your own booze."

"Is the dead past ever real dead?" inquires an exchange. We don't know. Ours has always been painfully alive.

If you find a button off your coat be gallant and tell your wife when she is busy. It will afford her an excuse for forgetting.

"Lucky is the woman who can tell a lie when she hears it," says an exchange. But some don't wait to hear it, and neither do some men.

Plain duties are often not relished simply because they are plain. A little of the spectacular injected into them would cause their performance with alacrity.

A Chicago school teacher recently gave up his job and opened up a beauty shop. He remarked, in substance, that in these days the man who dispenses knowledge has nothing before him but the poor house, while wealth and fame awaits the fellow who can hang artificial beauty onto an ugly mug.

Kentucky Republican Ranks Deserted Daily By Citizens Who See The Light.

Louisville, Ky.—The swing of the Republicans in Louisville and the State of Kentucky, who cannot abide by the wobble and wobble of Senator Harding on such a vital moral question as the League of Nations, has assumed the proportions of a landslide. Each day dozens of independent thinking, forward looking citizens announce that they cannot support the Republican ticket any longer.

The majority of them are swayed in this action by the belief that the only hope of the League of Nations is through the Democratic party.

Here are a few prominent Republicans who have recently announced their intention of voting for Cox:

LORD MAYOR OF CORK

Dies On Seventy-Third Day Fast.

NOTED SINN FEINER HAD A STORMY CAREER.

Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork, died at Brixton prison in London last Monday morning, after a hungry strike of seventy-three days, eclipsing any in the annals of the medical world.

MacSwiney, who had been unconscious for several days, did not recover his faculties before he died. Father Dominic, his private chaplain, and his brother John MacSwiney, were with him when the end came. Father Dominic was at the prison all night, and did not leave until several hours after MacSwiney breathed his last.

John MacSwiney and the chaplain, who had been waiting downstairs in the prison, were told by the prison officials at 4:35 o'clock that they should go to the Mayor's bedside, as they thought death was approaching. The brother asked for the privilege of communicating with other relatives who were not present, but the officials, it is said, refused him the use of a phone.

After the prisoner's death his brother and the chaplain were not permitted to leave the Brixton prison until 6:15 o'clock. John MacSwiney immediately conveyed word to the widow of the Lord Mayor, who was staying at a West End hotel with Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien, the former being the London executive of the Irish Self-Determination League.

Brilliant Career.
Terence MacSwiney was 40 years old, and was one of the most prominent Sinn Feiners. He started life as a draper's assistant, but became a poet, author, and a playwright before taking up politics seriously. Later he became violently anti-English.

While in Wakefield jail, Yorkshire, in 1916, he met Muriel Murphy, daughter of a wealthy Cork distiller, who visited the jail, and shortly after they were married, despite much opposition.

MacSwiney was elected as a Sinn Fein member from Cork to the British Parliament in 1918 but never took his seat. He was present at the first session of the Irish Parliament in 1919, when the establishment of the republic was confirmed, and was elected Lord Mayor of Cork in 1920.

For various political offenses he had been in jail, with brief intervals of liberty, since January, 1916, and in October, 1917, secured his release from jail by hunger striking.

Lewis Walker Won't Run For Judgeship.

Attorney Lewis L. Walker of Garrard County, was here this week attending court. Judge Walker has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the Republican nomination for circuit judge in the Lincoln-Boyle-Garrard-Mercer district next year but he said that he has no intention of making the race. Judge Walker served as circuit judge by appointment for a year and pleased everyone with his fairness and efficiency.

Christian Church Notes

Rev. E. B. Bourland has returned from the International Convention of the Disciples of Christ which was in session last week in St. Louis. He reports a fine trip and a great Convention. Between six and seven thousand people were in attendance. The reports of the United Christian Missionary Society showed very remarkable progress in all phases of the missionary and benevolent work at home and abroad. In addition to the statistical reports, many missionaries at home on furlough were present and told of conditions in China, in Africa, in Mexico and South America and other places where the Disciples have mission stations. Mr. Bourland will consider some phases of the year's work and some of the happenings of the Convention in his morning talk next Sunday and he is anxious to have as many as can come to be present that they may know something of the progress which has been made. He will also preach in the evening, his theme being, "Whatsoever A Man Sows."

Theodore R. Tunnell of Christian County, a life long Republican, has written to the Kentucky Democratic State Headquarters, enclosing a campaign contribution with a letter which states that he is unable to swallow the present Republican candidate and will vote the Democratic state and national ticket.

NEGRO VOTERS

A Writer In The Lexington Leader Asks

Colored Voters Some Pertinent Questions.

A writer in the Lexington Leader, the rankest, blackest, meanest Republican paper in Kentucky, asks the Negro voters some pertinent questions which every colored citizen should weigh carefully in his own mind before casting his ballot. The questions were evidently asked by a colored writer who signs his name "voter."

As to whether the colored property holders fare better under a democratic or republican administration in Kentucky will be answered this week when they go to pay their school taxes. Under the Stanley Administration they paid fifteen cents school taxes on each hundred dollars; under Edwin P. Morrow Administration they must pay seventy-five cents on each hundred dollars. The following is the list of questions which appeared in the Lexington Leader:

When will the colored race begin to think for itself?

When it was freed from slavery it immediately became the "political slave" of the Republican party.

"The Republican Slave Drivers" give their "orders" to the colored voters and they, like a flock of sheep fall in line, and march into the fold, never stopping to ask themselves whether they will be benefitted by this act of obedience.

Ask yourselves whether you received higher wages eight years ago when the Republicans were in power or "now" under a Democratic rule.

Ask yourselves if the colored race isn't more prosperous "today" than it was eight years ago.

Ask yourselves if your schools have improved.

Ask yourselves if your children are better fed.

Ask yourselves if there are more and better jobs for the working man and woman.

Ask yourselves these questions and many others then decide whether you wish to benefit yourselves by breaking away from the Republican party by voting the Democratic ticket, "or," "go back" to the rule of eight years ago.

Are you willing to be sheep? Or are you going to think independently?

Vote for the good of your country and yourself. —Danville Advocate.

TOBACCO MARKET To Open In Lexington December 1st.

The Lexington looseleaf tobacco market, the largest in the world, will open Wednesday, December 1st, says the Lexington Herald.

This has been decided by representatives of the various tobacco warehouse companies of the city, and preparations are being made for handling a record crop there this season.

An objection to the opening of the local market before the first of the year was made by the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, one of the large concerns, which buy tobacco there, owing to the fact that several Southern markets will not close until after December 1. The early opening will inconvenience them as well as other buyers, local warehousemen say, but the season must begin Dec. 1st, if the crop raised this year is to be disposed of by April 1st.

Buys Herd Stock.

Mr. J. W. Sweeney, who is never satisfied with anything but the best, attended the Kentucky Sales Co. sales of registered Shorthorn cattle at Winchester last Wednesday and purchased three of the topnotchers of the sale, which included two choice cows and a very fine bull of this breed, all registered and bred in the purple.

Mr. Sweeney will soon have established one of the choicest herds in the state and is wise in buying these choice animals.

Lancaster Wins.

By a score of 17 to nothing, the Lancaster High School Football team defeated the Richmond Normal yesterday afternoon on the local grounds.

Although outweighed by several pounds, man for man, the local boys showed more generalship and dozens and dozens first downs, while their opponents were only able to make three during the entire four periods.

The outstanding stars of the locals, were Holtzclaw Cox, Anderson, Sanders and Cochran, making several successful forward passes with heavy gains.

ERNST AGAINST PEOPLE'S RIGHTS

Lifelong Defense of Money Gives Him Wrong View-point As Legislator

One of the features of the political campaign in Kentucky has been the effort of the Republicans to force through the election of Richard P. Ernst, millionaire corporation attorney of Covington and Cincinnati, over Senator J. C. W. Beckham. To this end all kinds of sordid influences are being employed.

The Republicans are sending to the Miamus literature of anti-Catholic character, and to the Catholics they are sending the opposite.

With labor the Republicans are attempting to undermine Senator Beckham on the alleged pretext that he is unfair to labor, while the real reason is that Senator Beckham has for years been a leader of the moral forces in this state.

As between him and Richard P. Ernst there is but one choice which labor can successfully make. Senator Beckham has a labor record that no other public officer in Kentucky can compare with.

Led in Labor Legislation.

During his administration as Governor he initiated and was responsible for all of the financial labor legislation in the state. This included:

The Child Labor Law—at that time a model for the nation.

Creation of the office of Labor Inspector.

The inspection of factories and all establishments employing labor to insure safety and sanitary conditions.

The Mine Inspection Law safeguarding the work of the miners.

The creation of sentiment for the eight-hour day.

Building of the new State Capitol with union labor only.

An act forbidding child labor in coal mines.

Mr. Ernst, of course, never having been in office, has no labor record, but his life's work indicates clearly that in his mind the rights of the people are secondary.

Ernst Means Corporation.

The name Ernst is synonymous with the Union Light and Power Company and the South-Covington Railway Company, and other public utility corporations in Covington and Cincinnati. Through his long connection with them Mr. Ernst is bound to be antagonistic to the rights of the people, because as the lobbyist of these concerns he has always fought the public interests.

Recently Will H. Hays, Republican National Committee-man, claimed that the Republicans would gather the senatorship from this state. The G. O. P. has a special anxiety for so doing. They know that Mr. Ernst fits harmoniously into the pattern of things favored by Penrose, Lodge, Brandegee, and the real reactionary leaders of the Republican Senate clique. It is to clinch the control of the masses through big business that makes the Republicans anxious to get men of Ernst type into the United States Senate.

Part of Galvin Machine.

Mr. Ernst's chief representative in this state is Morris Galvin. Morris Galvin captured the control of the Kentucky Senate in 1920 in order to get a job for his friend and protégé, James A. Scott. He put Mr. Scott on the Tax Commission. It is of tremendous advantage to an attorney to have a friend on that commission. Mr. Galvin has one of the richest practices before the Tax Commission, and he is the close friend of Mr. Ernst, one of the richest men in this state.

Mr. Galvin is also boss of that political machine which in Covington and Newport defied regulatory laws of this state, even after prohibition became a national condition. Mr. Ernst cannot escape identification with this element in public government. His entire campaign is managed by one of the most important lieutenants of the former wet machinery in this state.

Mr. Ernst has no public record of any kind at all, but he pretends to be a great friend of education. Senator Beckham does not have to pretend. His record speaks for itself. Just a few educational achievements follow:

Beckham's Educational Record.

Increased school term from five to six months without raising the state tax rate, though it cost the state several hundred thousand dollars to do it.

Initiated and accomplished the establishment of the two State Normal Schools, one at Richmond and one at Bowling Green.

Insisted and forced the passage of the first uniform school text-book law against a hostile legislature.

Accomplished the passage of the first law in this state fixing a maximum price on school books, thus saving thousands of dollars to the parents of school children in the state.

Increased public school levy from 22 to 25 1/2 cents without raising the tax rate. He saved so much money in the sinking fund that he retired the state debt and put a large portion of the sinking fund levy to use for educational purposes.

Sponsored the passage of the Day Act to prevent white and colored children from attending the same schools together.

The people of Kentucky ought to ask themselves whether Mr. Ernst would have had the courage to sanction a law to separate the races in the public schools. The answer is easy. He would not. He would not have dared to offend the 100,000 black men and women in Kentucky on whom Mr. Ernst depends for the majority of his support. His dependence on this caste vote could have developed him into the courage to compel the sentiments of the real Kentuckians.

TOBACCO MARKET BETTER.

North Carolina Trade Better During Past Week.

Reports from the tobacco market in Carolina and Virginia during the past week is very much better than at any time since the market opened. At Wilson, N. C., larger companies are buying more freely and dealers on this market are buying more than at any time during the season. There is less dissatisfaction among the growers than at any time since the market opened.

At Danville, Va., the same rule applies, as the market there took a sharp upward turn during the last week, over one million pounds being sold there last week at an average of $27.67 against about the same number of pounds the previous week, that averaged only $21.84.

At Greenville, N. C., the top price was reached last week of $81.00 while many piles were sold for $50.00 and $60.00 a hundred.

Centre Defeated By Harvard.

In the presence of 42,000 people at Cambridge, Mass., Centre College football team went down in defeat at the hands of Harvard's powerful eleven last Saturday, by a score of 31 to 14.

The game attracted attention all over the country and the Danville boys were cheered heartily throughout the entire time of the game.

The ovations given the Kentucky boys by the Easterners was one of the distinct features of the game and the splendid work of the Kentucky team bore out the great reputation which it has made during the past few years.
